

CAPTURE is a freely accessible, web-based repository for finding and sharing practice-based evidence in health promotion and chronic disease prevention. CAPTURE seeks to harness the full breadth of Canadian public health intelligence – something the public health community has told us they need and want.

On the CAPTURE platform you can:

- Learn about the work of others
- Connect with colleagues around the corner or across Canada
- Reflect on your learnings
- Disseminate your practice-based knowledge and expertise
- Document the context of your work
- Share promising practices in real time
- Avoid re-inventing the wheel or repeating others' mistakes

Take the 10-minute challenge

CAPTURE's value to the public health community depends on it offering a critical mass of information about programs, projects and policy initiatives across Canada. To jump start this process, we're launching a campaign to encourage public health practitioners and managers to contribute information about their work.

You could win an iPad 2!

Contribute your program information to CAPTURE. Once your information has been uploaded to the platform, simply verify it online to become eligible to win an iPad 2 (draw December 15, 2011).

Get started now

Complete the 10-minute Challenge Entry Form and submit it to ✉ dayna.albert@thecaptureproject.ca or access the Platform at www.thecaptureplatform.ca.